

GUIDE TO PASSPORT CLUBS

Rotary clubs continue to evolve to meet the changing needs of their communities and local professionals. Some new and existing clubs are adopting an innovative passport club model to offer their members more flexibility and a broader experience.

WHAT IS A PASSPORT CLUB?

A passport club is a Rotary club that gives its members a more flexible club experience by:

- Encouraging its members to visit other clubs and participate in their club activities regularly
- Relaxing the attendance policy
- Offering a variety of meeting formats

New and existing clubs can decide to implement the passport club model. The clubs may adopt all of the options listed above or choose just the ones that work for them. A club's name does not need to include the descriptor "passport club," but the club's bylaws do need to be updated accordingly (see How Do Club Bylaws Differ for a Passport Club? below).

Because they are Rotary clubs, passport clubs have a club president, board, and committees. The president-elect and other incoming officers attend training seminars like PETS and the district training assembly. And members are encouraged to attend district and international events and to get involved in ways that are meaningful to them.

The term "passport" refers to the ability to move freely from club to club, attending the meetings or participating in the activities of other clubs. Any Rotarian can attend another club when traveling, but passport clubs encourage their members to do so regularly which brings fresh ideas back to their own club.

HOW DO PASSPORT CLUBS WORK?

Passport clubs determine how they want to operate. Here are some common practices of passport clubs:

- Meeting less frequently
- Focusing meetings on service or social activities
- Setting affordable dues
- Measuring club health by participation rather than attendance

How do they meet? Meetings can be social gatherings, service activities, virtual meetings, or fundraisers. As long as something is on the club's calendar twice a month, the club complies with RI policy. Not all members have to attend to make it a valid club meeting, as long as it's open to all members and visitors.

All Rotary clubs, including passport clubs, need to meet at least twice a month in some way. Service and social activities and online meetings count.

How do they measure member engagement? Because members are encouraged to visit other clubs' meetings and take part in their projects and activities, passport clubs use measures other than meeting attendance to gauge club health. For example, some passport clubs require their members to participate or perform service for a minimum number of hours per year, which can include attending meetings of their own club or any other Rotary club, helping other clubs with fundraisers or projects, or participating in a service activity outside of Rotary.

What about dues? Because they are members of a Rotary club, passport club members pay club and district dues, as well as RI dues. Club and district dues vary, while RI dues are the same for all active members on your membership roster. Passport clubs are free to set club dues at any reasonable amount.

Whatever the amount, it's important to make the breakdown of club, district, and RI dues clear so that everyone understands how much members are expected to pay.

What is the protocol for visiting other clubs? Just like anyone who wants to visit another club, passport club members should first contact the club's leaders to make arrangements for visiting. Your club should also discuss how it will host and follow up with guests.

Members of passport clubs visit other clubs because they want to meet other members and have a variety of club experiences. The visits are not meant to make up for a missed meeting or to fulfill an attendance requirement.

WHAT ARE THE BENEFITS OF A PASSPORT CLUB?

The benefits of a passport club include:

- Flexibility – Having different options for getting involved accommodates members' busy schedules, allowing them more choices for fitting Rotary into their lives.
- Engaging meetings – Meetings can focus on service and socializing rather than speakers and meals. By visiting other clubs' meetings, members can learn what other clubs are doing and bring new ideas to their club.
- Broad appeal – A passport club often appeals to people who wouldn't join a more traditional club and helps keep people who might otherwise leave in Rotary.
- More connections – Members quickly build relationships across the district and beyond.
- Stronger service projects – Connecting with members of other clubs presents opportunities for clubs to partner on service projects to create greater impact.
- Affordability – Costs are kept to a minimum because meetings don't include meals.

Although any club can implement the flexible options discussed here, a passport club sees them as a way of operating, using many of them.

These flexible options are appealing to some members while traditional clubs remain appealing to others.

HOW DO CLUB BYLAWS DIFFER FOR A PASSPORT CLUB?

If your existing club is considering adopting the flexible options that passport clubs tend to use, discuss the benefits with your club members, make sure the club is in agreement on the changes, and update your club's existing bylaws to reflect your new practices and policies.

If you're forming a new passport club, only a small portion of the recommended Rotary club bylaws need to be adjusted. See the sample bylaws or passport clubs in appendix 1. Contact your Club and District Support representative if you'd like any assistance revising your bylaws.
